Dear Barak,

The Financial Times and Misys are delighted to announce the inaugural World Trade Symposium: Connecting Commerce, Driving Development and Enabling Evolution for Improving People's Lives. The forum welcomes leaders in the world of trade on Tuesday 7th and Wednesday 8th June 2016 at the Royal Garden Hotel London, UK.

We are at a crucial moment in the history of world trade. Capital flows into emerging markets are reversing amid slowdowns in China and other developing economies. At the same time, we are now witnessing the advent of Globalisation 2.0 and a new era of Industry 4.0. New technologies such as blockchain have already begun to disrupt and reshape supply chains. How will the convergence of trade, finance, technology and people affect the nature of commerce in the 21st century? How can we work together to secure long-term economic growth as well as promoting financial inclusion?

The World Trade Symposium proposes a highly interactive, action-oriented C-Level dialogue on the major themes that will shape the future direction of international commerce with three themes and one goal to improve people's lives

- Connecting commerce through the reconciliation of global and domestic rules to build a favourable business climate and sustainable growth
- Driving development through the global value chain for business and people
- Enabling evolution through the translation of digital disruption to adoption and progression
